

Positive adjectives that start with V

44 adjectives with meanings and examples. Updated 10 October 2026. Free to print and share in a classroom.

Valiant adj.

Showing courage and determination in a difficult situation.

The valiant rescue effort continued through heavy rain.

Valid adj.

Sound, reasonable, or worthy of being accepted.

Mina raised a valid concern about access to the new service.

Validated adj.

Confirmed as accurate, sound, or worthy of recognition.

The team based its decision on a validated testing method.

Valorous adj.

Showing great courage in the face of danger.

The valorous firefighter returned to guide two residents outside.

Valuable adj.

Highly useful, important, or worthy of care.

Her notes provided valuable context for the new team.

Value-added adj.

Improved by an extra feature, service, or process.

The cooperative sells value-added preserves made from surplus fruit.

Valued adj.

Recognized as important, useful, or worthy of appreciation.

Every volunteer received a note explaining why their work was valued.

Velvety adj.

Pleasingly smooth, soft, or rich in texture.

The singer's velvety voice settled gently over the room.

Venerable adj.

Deserving respect because of character, wisdom, or long service.

The venerable teacher still remembered the hopes of former students.

Venerated adj.

Held in deep respect because of character or achievement.

The venerated physician trained generations of rural doctors.

Venturesome adj.

Willing to try bold or unfamiliar approaches.

A venturesome baker turned local herbs into an award-winning loaf.

Venturous adj.

Boldly willing to explore unfamiliar or risky possibilities.

The venturesome researcher tested a promising method others had overlooked.

Venust adj.

Beautiful, graceful, and elegant in appearance.

A venust arch framed the garden's quiet reflecting pool.

Veracious adj.

Consistently truthful and accurate.

The veracious witness corrected even the details that favored her case.

Verdant adj.

Green with healthy plant growth.

After the rains, the once-dry hillside became verdant.

Verdurous adj.

Rich with green growth, health, or freshness.

Rain transformed the dusty slope into a verdurous meadow.

Veridical adj.

Truthful, accurate, and corresponding with reality.

The archive preserved a veridical account of the negotiations.

Verifiable adj.

Able to be checked and confirmed with evidence.

Each claim in the report links to a verifiable public record.

Verified adj.

Checked and confirmed as true, accurate, or authentic.

Only verified measurements were included in the final table.

Versatile adj.

Able to adapt or be useful in many different situations.

The versatile hall serves as a classroom, theater, and storm shelter.

Versed adj.

Knowledgeable and experienced in a subject or skill.

A guide versed in local history led the archive tour.

Veteran adj.

Having extensive experience and proven skill in an activity.

A veteran nurse calmly organized the crowded vaccination clinic.

Viable adj.

Capable of working successfully under real conditions.

The pilot showed that the low-cost repair was viable.

Vibrant adj.

Full of life, color, energy, or activity.

The renovated square became a vibrant place for markets and music.

Victorious adj.

Having achieved success in a contest or difficult effort.

The victorious debaters thanked the classmates who helped them prepare.

Vigilant adj.

Carefully watchful for danger, error, or changing conditions.

A vigilant lifeguard noticed the swimmer's distress immediately.

Vigorous adj.

Strong, healthy, and full of active energy.

The young trees showed vigorous growth after the spring rain.

Vindicated adj.

Cleared from blame or shown to have been right.

The vindicated scientist returned to her research with confidence.

Vintage adj.

Classic and especially admired for lasting quality.

The mechanic restored the vintage bicycle for another generation.

Virent adj.

Fresh, green, healthy, and not withered.

Virent moss softly covered the stones beside the spring.

Virescent adj.

Beginning to turn green with fresh plant growth.

Virescent shoots covered the hillside after the early rain.

Virile adj.

Showing robust strength, energy, and vitality.

The virile dancer brought athletic force to every movement.

Virtuosic adj.

Showing exceptional technical skill and artistry.

Her virtuosic piano solo drew a standing ovation.

Virtuous adj.

Acting according to strong moral principles.

The story asks whether a virtuous choice can also be a difficult one.

Visionary adj.

Able to imagine a better future and a credible path toward it.

The visionary planner protected space for public transit decades ahead.

Vital adj.

Necessary, life-supporting, or extremely important.

Clean water is vital to every community.

Vitalizing adj.

Giving fresh energy, strength, or life.

A vitalizing swim helped him feel ready for the day.

Vivacious adj.

Lively, animated, and attractively full of energy.

The vivacious host drew every guest into the conversation.

Vivid adj.

Bright, clear, and powerfully detailed or expressive.

His vivid description helped the children imagine the reef.

Vivifying adj.

Giving fresh life, energy, or animation.

A vivifying breeze moved through the crowded summer room.

Volant adj.

Quick, nimble, or capable of moving lightly.

The volant midfielder slipped neatly between two taller defenders.

Voluntary adj.

Chosen freely rather than required or forced.

Participation remained voluntary, with no penalty for declining.

Voluptuous adj.

Richly attractive and pleasing to the senses.

Voluptuous velvet curtains gave the small historic theater warmth.

Vulnerary adj.

Used or useful for healing wounds.

The handbook clearly described several traditional plants with vulnerary uses.